THURSDAY EVEN'G., FEBRUARY G.

ABERNETHY'S COURTSHIP .- It has been said by "George Sand" that love and courtship end together; so that he who would be always in love must be ever a woosr. Such, however, was not the opinion of the famous physicion Dr. Abornethy, whose courtship, like his prescriptions, was short and to the point. The doctor had been attending a lady for several weeks, and had observed during those hurried visits certain qualities in the daughter which he considered would render her invaluable as a wife. Accordingly on a Saturday, when taking leave of his patient, he addressed her to the following purport: "You are now to well that I need not to pay you my farewell visit. But in the mean-time I wish you and your daughter seriously to consider the proposal I am now about to make. It is abrupt and uncoremonious, I am aware; but the excessive occupation of my time by my professional duties affords me no leisure to accomplish what I desire by the more ordinary course of attention and solicitation. My annual receipts amount to —— pounds, and I can settle —— pounds on my wife; my character is generally known to the public, so that you may generally known to the public, so that you may readily ascertain what it is. I have seen in your daughter a tender and affectionate child, an assidicus and careful nurse, and a gentle and ladylike member of a family. Such a person must be all that a husband could covet, and I offer my hand and fortune for her acceptance. On Monday when I call I shall expect your determination; for I really have not time for the rou time of courtehip." It would have been interesting to know how this was received by the patient and her daughter. The blunt intimation of annual receipts; the "my character is known to the public, so you may readily ascertain what it is;" then the declaration, "and no time for courtship," "shall expect an answer on Monday;" all this must have been somewhat starting to the patient "who was now so well." To medical men, who above all others long to kill medical men, who above all others long to kill two birds with one stone, the above prescription may prove a useful one, and might with advan-tage be placed in the Pharmacol w.a. It was at least thoroughly successful in the case recorded, for "a happier couple never existed."
